4. Recent discussion with []. The Doctor will be getting around to the various offices to consult on the Agency's historical program.

5. The CPC meetings which he had attended so far. He felt that these meetings were most helpful in focusing on the future. In this connection he wondered how we might better attack the interface between collection programs and analysis. He used the impact of [] as an illustration and noted that [] would present a similar problem. Even though the answers are not apparent now, S&T must try to foresee what intelligence will be and should be collected in 1974. He considered the possibility of establishing a small group of broad thinkers within the Directorate to examine this problem and asked that the office heads consider whether this or some other scheme would provide the best approach.

6. Recent S&T Panel meeting. He felt that the members were enthusiastic about being helpful and desired to continue using the first half day for intelligence briefings. The Panel planned to meet two days bi-monthly, with the next meeting scheduled for 6-7 March. Biographical material on the Panel members will be sent to the various offices. [REDACTED]
